With the stagings down from the new Odd Fellows' Block, a better idea of it can be gained, and a better appreciation of what an addition it will be to the place. Picture fans are looking forward to the opening of the Strand Theatre, which it is understood will be put in use as soon as possible, without waiting for the finish and decorations to be completed.

Work on the new house block went merrily on through the day. Stage sets were being put in place, and the walls on the second floor. The walls on the north and west sides of the building have been run up to the banding near the tops of the upper windows. We begin now to get some idea of how large a building this will be when it is complete.

At the close of the business meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Desiring Memorial Church a surprise birthday party was held in honor of Mrs. Stewart's birthday which occurred this week. Birthday cake, fancy crackers, hot cocoa and applesauce from mysterious sources constituted a happy hour was spent with the genial hostess, and all wished her health and happiness in the coming year.

There will be a meeting of the American Legion Wednesday, Jan. 11, at the Legion rooms. All come.

Just what kind of a star South Paris was under last week will have to be guessed at, but several mysterious actions took place during that time. On the first page of the Democrat can be seen an account of a mysterious money forger, but that is not the only mysterious transaction that took place.

One of our citizens, while walking along Main Street, stopped to look up at the new block being built, and noticed that it started to move on saw a pocket knife lying in the street beside him. It looked like his own knife and feeling in his pocket he found that it was gone. There seemed to be little doubt but what it was his, so he put it in this cavity. From this place he traveled to Norway and went into a store. While standing about this shop, he happened to look at the door and there was another knife like the one he had picked up in South Paris. The gentleman rubbed his eyes, and began to wonder what he had been taking that he was seeing things, but he picked up the article and putting it in his pocket he discovered that the knife was gone. This undoubtedly was the same one. Before returning the knife to the pocket he made a survey of the interior and discovered a small hole therein. This explained the exit of the knife, but the wonder is that it should take such favorable time to make a break for liberty. Evidently it wasn't his day to lose a knife.

Revaluation Finished.

Mark E. Perry of Sweden and Gardner H. Rankin of Hiram, who have been making a revaluation of the town of Paris, finished their work last week and have returned to their homes. This revaluation was authorized by the annual town meeting in 1920, though doubtless few expected it to be so much of a job. Mr. Perry and Mr. Rankin were later engaged to do the work, and began on it during the season of 1920, and have been revaluators in the town quite a portion of the time since.

Community Club Notes.

The club is very fortunate in securing Miss Gertrude Hartley, assistant director of religious education in Massachusetts, to speak at the next meeting Tuesday, Jan. 10. Although Miss Hartley was born in St. John, N. B., she came to Maine early in life, was graduated from Bates College, and began her work in religious education in the town of South Paris. While attending a number of religious training, she became interested in a course of psychology taught by Dr. E. Hartley in connection with the "Handbook of the Sunday School" to review. Her review of this book was highly commended, and she was asked many times to give this paper before various groups of religious workers.

Miss Hartley began to see how she could make improvements in teaching handbook in connection with religious instruction, and her ideas were so practical and helpful that different summer schools and institutes sought courses in such work. The public schools also sought recognition to the value of project teaching and handbook as presented by her.

The idea presented in her book, "The Use of Projects in Religious Education," are being taught in religious conferences and institutes throughout New England. It is interesting to know that Miss Hartley was a pioneer in this method which has since taken such prominence in the educational world.

Another New Building in Prospect.

This lot also been purchased from the Maxim land at the rear of the lot so as to make the lot deeper. The lot has frontage of 60 feet.

It is understood that as early in the spring as possible work will begin on a freeproof building of brick and concrete on this lot, which will have a store on the ground floor, bowling alleys in the basement, and a second floor to be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl P. Dunbar.

Western Maine Poultry Association.

EXHIBITS 600 BIRDS AND 51 VARIETIES IN SOUTH PARIS.

The Western Maine Poultry Association held their twelfth annual exhibition in the Grange Hall, South Paris, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week.

There was a good exhibit of birds, some five hundred in number, occupying both the lower and upper halls. In all, including bantams, turkeys, ducks and geese, there were fifty-one varieties on exhibition.

The largest individual exhibit was that of O. W. Eggleston, of Lyndonville, Vt. He had thirty-seven varieties and two hundred birds in the hall.

Perhaps the most popular variety of hen, judged by the number of exhibits, was Rhode Island Red, both the Rose Comb and Single Comb kinds. Guy W. Coffin of Mechanic Falls had a large exhibit of the Rose Comb variety, while his wife had an equally good exhibit of the Single Comb variety.

Of local exhibitors, O. Guy Buck of South Paris had the largest exhibit and most varieties.

The Democrat would like to mention each exhibit separately if space permitted, but the prize birds published below are the prize birds of the exhibition, and the quality of the birds. On all recognized varieties of poultry the prize birds were as follows:
